PIERRE THOMAS

Pierre was born in Ghent, Belgium where he lived until his family moved to the Central African Country formerly known as Zaïre (nowadays the Democratic Republic of Congo).

He lived there from 1978 till 1989 after which he came back to Belgium to specialize in Tropical fishfarming and animal husbandry.

He had the opportunity to gain experience in the field in Rwanda in 1992 and in September 1992 he went to Ecuador to do an apprenticeship in the CENAIM (Centro Nacional de Acuicultura e Investigaciones Marinas).

He has travelled extensively through Central and South America after which he was offered a position as a naturalist guide in the Galápagos Archipelago where he started to work in 1994. Pierre has led many groups in the islands and was in charge of the organization of expeditions in several cruise ships for almost 10 years.
